A CHILLED WEEKEND IN THE SOUTH DOWNS

Friday July 26th - Sunday July 28th 2019

PROGRAMME

A fundraiser for social network

Pete Lawrence welcomes you to the glorious Sussex countryside

Welcome to this intimate, largely music-based mini-festival in the South Downs, modelled on the original Big Chill. All profits will go towards Campfire Convention, a new social network, which is the latest project I have been working on for the last few years. The weekend is in some senses a Big Chill reunion in the original early spirit before commercial forces took over. But we are also looking to new beginnings.

The idea for this event came out of a chance remark from Norman Jay MBE over lunch in London when we were reminiscing about Good Times, The Big Chill and looking forward too. We talked about Norman's plans - he's writing a book - and he talked about how he could support the emerging Campfire Convention community.

He then turned to me and casually remarked "Have you considered doing a little Big Chill reunion as a fundraiser for Campfire?"

To be honest, it wasn't something I had given any thought to prior to that point. But on my drive down to Brighton that afternoon, the idea was circulating around my head and I spoke to a few more people about it, when I got to the coast.

By lunchtime the next day, we had been offered a site in the South Downs (special thanks to Steve Hoare) and within a couple of weeks, a small team emerged who were up for organising the event. We had a plan.

So I started emailing a few friends about the possibility of doing a new, one-off Big Chill-style event and was pleasantly surprised by the response. It wasn't long before a line-up of 'old favourites' began to take shape.

The result is this - a cosy, intimate, homespun, spontaneous celebration of life, a respect to the original spirit of The Big Chill and hopefully a glimpse into future possibilities for different styles of events.

The Big Chill is still loved by many and while it's great to gather in a field and recreate some of the original vibe of the early event - before commercial constraints became the driving force. We have an eye on the future and we are moving forward with a variety of Campfire events (see August Campout details in the programme). It makes sense to connect up these two forces, which have been so central to my life over the last 20 years or more.

Have great weekend and let's create sparks!

The Big Chill festival was launched in 1994 by Pete Lawrence and Katrina Larkin and was originally brought to life in the form of one-night parties at the Union Chapel in Islington.

During the height of the festival's popularity, it went on to tour around the world, staging events in Europe, Japan and Goa. Now Pete Lawrence is returning with The Little Chill to bring together support and awareness in his launch of Campfire Convention - a new form of social media that empowers people on and offline to connect, build community and catalyse social change.

Encouraged by The Big Chill's success in building a 40,000 capacity event around a thriving online community united in a common interest, Pete was inspired to explore how communities and social networking can make a difference. His vision for Campfire Convention takes this concept of community a stage further and connects into the growing eco-consciousness and a movement towards member-led co-operative projects.

Norman Jay: "Campfire is all about a modern, more ethical, green way of communicating. The good thing about this enterprise is that it's a profit sharing one, rewarding the original contributors and great creators who've already given their time for free because they believe in this project, so literally everyone's a winner."

Renaissance of Humanity Campfire Space

Big things have small beginnings. And you can be there at the start. Campfire Convention's regional group, the Athens beacon, and the social enterprise, Oi Polloi, are holding space for the Renaissance of Humanity and invite everyone to elevate their thinking and their outlook about what the future holds.

Programmed by Campfire steering group member, and social innovation lead, Mary Valiakas, this constitutes the humble beginnings of an ambitious plan to gather the best minds, and the biggest hearts of our generation – and invite them to reimagine how society operates in the place where modern civilisation has gone from cradle to grave: Greece.

The speaker line-up is:

- Benita Matofska, a global leader dedicated to mainstreaming the sharing economy worldwide as the new socioeconomic paradigm, author of Generation Share, and the pioneer behind Global Sharing Week the annual celebration of sharing that aims to shift the focus away from what's wrong with the world, to what's right with it.
- Indra Adnan, founder of the Soft Power Network and co-initiator of The Alternative UK, a platform aiming to reimagine politics in the UK and beyond
- Dimitrios Kraniotis, TedX speaker, cultural ambassador and co-founder of Artk4Art that's building bridges between Greece and the UK through arts and culture.
- Andy Chapman (Director) and Sandra White (core member and ecopsychologist) from the Economy for the Common Good, a social movement advocating for an alternative economic model based on wellbeing of people and the environment.

The rationale behind this speakers' forum? That in this age of crisis, only big ideas can tackle big challenges. And that global solutions start with the local and the personal. This is why talks, discussions and panels are centred around the question 'what does it mean to be human today, in a world with over-depleted resources, and a burgeoning population?'

Healing Area and Yoga

Alison David : Mmmmm - Meditation and Mantra workshop Self Care and Connection. Alison has been a professional singer all her adult life and has been meditating regularly for 5 years. She is currently finishing an album called Mmmmm - sharing her self care toolkit which includes funky dancey mantras, comfort songs and guided meditations. She will show you how to use your voice and hands as healing tools and get everyone singing together. Her techniques are great for novice meditators because rather than focusing on quietening the mind, they are a call to Presence and body awareness.

Emma Gomez' unique style of SweThai massage is a blend of Swedish and deep Thai Massage allowing you to completely relax and unwind, creating a space where you can totally surrender into your own states of bliss. It will both ground and elevate you. This massage is done on a mat on the floor and over clothes or towels, it is often referred to as lazy mans' yoga..
Swe Thai - Foot and hand massage - half hour

Geoff Greentree has been practising and teaching Shiatsu since 1989 and is pleased to have the opportunity to offer one-to-one sessions here. He was at The Big Chill from the outset at Union Chapel and was involved in all the early Big Chill festivals and some later events too. He is offering singing bowl sound healing treatments both as an adjunct to Shiatsu and in its own right and will present a pop-up singing bowl workshop during the weekend. He is looking forward to reunions and meeting new faces too

Louise Wallis Yoga Nidra, a guided full-body meditation easing you into a blissful dreamy state of deep conscious relaxation in between waking and sleeping.

Emmaline Maxwell A morning flow to make you glow...a playful yet fully rounded yoga class..

Maren Weege is an experienced yoga teacher based in London. She weaves her classes from the multidimensional elements of the yoga toolbox: movement, posture, breath, sound, guided deep relaxation and meditation. Due to her multilevel approach to teaching group classes, you will be met where you are regardless of your level of yoga experience. According to her students and doula clients, Maren exudes a deep sense of calm which she peppers with the invitation to be curious, play and explore.

1 hr treatment £50; 30 mins £30

Old Tree Brewery : Living drinks for living soil

Old Tree began between an ancient woodland and an abandoned industrial estate in Sussex, with shared experience in forestry and community gardening, combined with a passion for ecology, giving root to its values and ideology. Inspired by the secrets of ancient fermentation and forest culture, we started as a social enterprise in 2014 to explore ways to use seasonal, botanical drink creation to reconnect people with nature.

Old Tree Brewery is committed to repairing the soil and supporting local communities by composting all our brewery and event waste, donating the resulting compost to Brighton community gardens. As part of our commitment to having a positive impact, we are growing edible hedgerows at supportive local farms in order to keep our ingredients as local as possible while also building spaces for increased biodiversity.

We brew kombucha, apple cider vinegar shrubs, seasonal champagnes, and other live, fermented delights, utilising local, seasonal ingredients to make the most amazing flavours. We create living drinks for living soil.

Leave No Trace!

The Little Chill's ethos reflects the values of Campfire Convention, the community platform with sustainability at its heart.

Going local

By catalysing a return to local initiatives and resources we provide a response to supermarket dominance and the unnatural rhythms of global capitalism.

In practical terms, The Little Chill will source local enterprises to supply its toilets, recycling bins, stages, bars, and food stalls.

Partners include: Old Tree Brewery Space + Thyme and Long Man Brewery Brighton Sound System, GS Clearance and WC Hire.

Rubbish

We are borrowing a beautiful spot in the Sussex countryside. We will leave it as beautiful as we found it. The Big Chill was one of the first music festivals to commit to 'leaving no trace' and The Little Chill will be no different.

All drinks will be available in compostable cups (pints or half pints only) – all cups will be collected by Old Tree and composted with its organic brewery matter to feed local food growing projects. All packaging and containers used will either be refilled or composted.

Our caterers Space + Thyme have adopted sustainable and compostable packaging to serve your food in. Food trays and burger boxes are made using plant fibres from waste streams including sugar cane and palm while hot food boxes are made from board derived from FSC (Forest Stewardship Council) approved sources and are unbleached, which ensures minimal chemical processing. Space + Thyme also use wooden cutlery, which can be easily composted, and napkins are made from recycled paper.

Cooking oils are sourced from Kent-based supplier Edible Oil Direct. Once used, the oil is returned back to Edible Oil Direct, who turn this into other products including animal feeds, cosmetics, or biodiesel fuel, which is a cheaper, greener alternative to diesel.

Please use your black bin liner to take home any rubbish that cannot be recycled. There are recycling bins for all food and bar-related waste, including compatible vessels.

Wellbeing

The concept of community provides a safe space where we are able to talk to others, make sense of the world, of rapid change and realise we're not alone. We shouldn't underestimate it.

By building meaningful connection to each other and to our groups we build resilience and self-sufficiency. It empowers us with the fundamentals of living: how we feed ourselves, source and use energy, and how we share wisdom.

We have made every effort to make sure The Little Chill has as little effect on the environment as possible. However, it is just a small 500-person event and we have limited resources, so will undoubtedly have missed some things. If you have any suggestions on how we can make our Campfire Conventions greener, then please get in touch.

Campfire : 'Help us spark a radical new model for community social networking' says founder Pete Lawrence

What if social media didn't lock us up in online echo chambers, exploit users for their data, wasn't funded by advertising or dictated by algorithms and didn't exist to line shareholder's pockets? What if, instead, it actually did what it says on the 'social network' tin? Help build and strengthen communities? That's the vision for Campfire Convention, a new kind of conscious social media that works for its members –and seeds new ideas and social change for the benefit of all.

In the wake of the Facebook / Cambridge Analytica scandal, it's now clear that the 'surveillance capitalism' model of social media as an advertising platform is unsustainable, built as it is on monetising data. The full implications of us choosing a digital advertising platform as our presumed safe space in which to spill all our most intimate thoughts, hopes, fears and passions are only now being realised. It creates a forum in which the owners of a gigantic operation rule the social media world - arguably the wider world too - for their own ends and for shareholder profit.

It was through the Big Chill's flowering that I saw the power in community, and people uniting around a purpose or common interest. This led me to explore further how communities can make a difference, so for the last decade I have been inspired to evolve a new form of social networking.

The new model is all about handing on to the community and shaping a truly modern co-operative that can pioneer a new model for a community network as we enter post-capitalist era.

Help us share.. together we can get to where we want to be.

Can social media be a force for good? How can humanity truly benefit from this technological revolution? Campfire Convention is a conscious social network empowering people on- and off-line to connect, spark ideas and catalyse social change.

Enter Campfire Convention. Bridging the divide between on- and off-line, and giving virtual and face-to-face interactions equal weighting. Campfire's events all over the UK have demonstrated the value of meeting in person, being in the physical presence of others and feeling their passions, respecting their ideas and viewpoints. We have developed a core network of quality contributors and are already syndicating the writing of key thinkers and commentators such as George Monbiot, Daniel Pinchbeck and Kate Raworth. In the real-world space, we are having inspiring conversations, lighting Beacons around the world, and sparking new projects, from music to activism, mentorship to collaboration.

Bringing people together has been the common thread through my life's work. Joining the dots, then stepping back to watch the sparks fly. It's never been more urgent to ignite synergies around social change and conscious transformation and here, Campfire can play a central role.

Future Directions

Myself and a small team have spent the last four years building the site to the soft launch stage. At a great personal cost, we've succeeded in inspiring a growing team of volunteers, writers and event trailblazers to come together to build something of value. We've started to grow a network of support around us including people like Brian Eno, our first patron. Now, we're ready to take things to the next level – and push the platform closer to its full potential.

Campfire is well placed to play its part as a force for significant social change and is supporting the work of communities such as Extinction Rebellion, We Own It, Building Bridges For Peace, Flatpack Democracy, The Alternative UK, Sortition Foundation, The Tree Conference, The Coalition of Fun and others.

Campfire can be an important model for future directions in community social networking. That's why I can't ignore the fire in the belly that drives many of us to make this work for everyone so we can develop new frameworks and community connections that help speed up this transition that is already in progress.

Campfire isn't a service, it's a community initiative, which focuses on building something that we can all benefit from rather than 'what's in it for me'.
